How Our Business Model Work

Understanding the High-Yield Investment Cycle

Finorich's model presents the idea that investor deposits are pooled and used for forex trading, where profits are supposedly generated from currency fluctuations across global markets. They claim that their trading strategies deliver fixed daily returns above 2%, implying consistent gains even in highly volatile market conditions. Investors choose a plan, funds are allocated, and returns are distributed along with referral bonuses for new sign-ups. However, because real forex returns vary daily and are not predictable or fixed, the system's sustainability appears tied more to continuous investor inflow than to genuine, transparent, performance-based forex trading results.
